Preliminary figures in for WHS renovations

The Wilmington Permanent Building Committee has not yet arrived at a valid estimate of costs for its project of new additions to and renovation of the high school.

As of the close of the meeting of Tuesday evening the figures were: Renovation of existing buildings and facilities, $3,352,000, and construction of new facilities, $2,705,000. Add to this the $35,000 already appropriated from taxation and the figures amount to $6,092,000.

Nor is the committee certain as to the amount of reimrsement that will come from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Diane Allan mentioned the sum of 46 percent, from memory, at the end of the meeting, and later revised it to 46.7 to 50 percent reimbursement for interest, with up to 50 percent reimbursement for construction. The architects will have the figures ready, they said, for the next meeting.

The committee expects to add up all the figures next week, and to be prepared to present those figures to the state School Building Assistance Board (SBAB). The architects seem to be of the belief that the reimbursement on interest costs amount of "up to 20 percent."

Part of the Tuesday discussion, on which no final decision was made, was whether or not to transfer tennis courts across the common, to the site of the old Center School, or to make that area into a parking area. The old school is to be demolished shortly.

If the tennis courts stay in their present position they should be raised six inches, the committee was told. The basic costs to demolish, add more gravel, and rebuild was estimated at $45,000.

To construct new courts elsewhere would be $60,000, basic costs.

The athletic facilities are a matter of interest to many persons. Wilmington's selectmen have presented their thoughts from time to time. Committee members are, in part, of the belief that athletic facilities should be on a separate article, to be discussed apart from educational facilities, in the special town meeting.

The figures at this time for a new field house are $700,000. This would include, at basic costs, an eight station gymnasium.

The figures for a four station gymnasium would be $400,000. According to the architects this could include an indoor track and room for four full basketball games.

There is no final decison at this point.

The football bleachers, too, were a subject of discussion. The estimate to repair the present bleachers, said to have been made by Mr. McClanahan, is $70,000. The estimate for a new set of bleachers, with concrete stands and metal benches is reported at $95,000. This would add approximately 400 seats over the present capacity.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski describes the new bleachers as being planned to be elevated five feet above the football field and with ramps, to aid handicapped persons. Beneath the bleachers, he said, there could be storage facilities and a space for hot dog and other refreshment sales.

The storage space would be used to store lawn mowers, track hurdles, sleds, dummies for football practice, etc.

Andrea Silverman, aware of the fact that the costs can escalate, said that if she had to make a choice it would be for educational facilities "I would say No, to the bleachers."

Another opinion was voiced by Bernie LaVita, who believed the committee was getting into to high costs. "If we keep going," he warned, "we could bet up to $8,000,000 in costs, and what would the people say? You have to say No to some cerain items!"

It was about this time that Andrea suggested this be a selectman's article in the special town meeting.

Buzz Stapczynski pointed out that in the present bleachers, which are 30 years old, when people in the first three rows stand up, it is useless for the people in back.

A sprinkler system, for the football field, was also defended by Stapczynski. The estimated cost is $21,000. LaVita had a strong feeling against a sprinkler system. He thought the committee could put $21,000 to much better use.

Stapczynski said the sprinkler system is conceived as a labor saving device. Someone has to go out, at the present time, every day, and move the sprinklers around. This system, he said, would save the town money.

A fence around the baseball field also found the town manager in support. There is too much vandalism he said. The "kids" get onto the field in autos, and "I have to call in men, on overtime, on Saturdays, to grade the field just before the games."

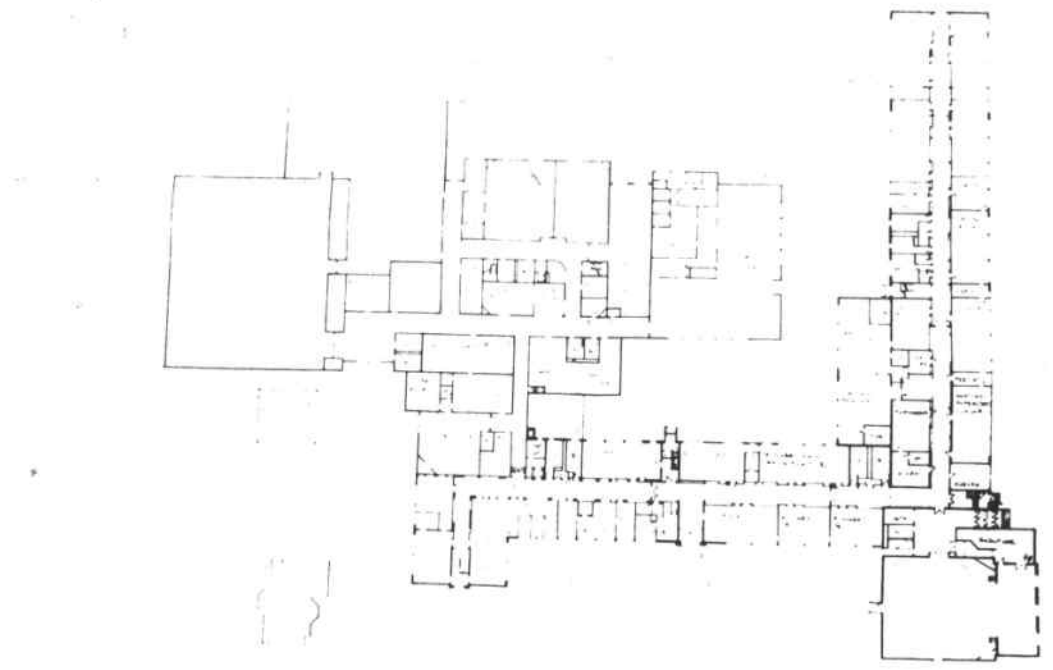

John Brooks suggested that a fence be built around the school, as a part of the school project, and thus entitle the town to reimbursement. The architects said that was possible.

Diane Allan suggested concrete posts, to keep kids with automobiles from breaking through. Andrea Silverman pointed out that kids on motorcycles could get through. The town manager spoke of having a chain link fence. The architect assured the committee "something can be done."

John Brooks, speaking of the proposed field house, said he had been on a tour of inspection "in the Merrimack River Valley."

Only Methuen and Reading, he said, would have a better field house than that proposed for Wilmington. He excepted Lowell High School in this statement. Lowell has a building which is 400 feet by 400 feet, and is in many ways the best to be found in the area.

Next week, Chairman Marvin Weiner said, as the meeting closed: "We'll rank in the figures for the SBAC."

School plans Preliminary plans for additions and renovations to Wilmington High School include a new gymnasium (upper left) and a new cafeteria (top center). The front of the building is at the bottom of this sketch. The new gymnasium would occupy much of the existing parking lot.

Pops concert this weekend

Just a few short months after being refurbished, the bandstand on the Tewksbury Town Common will be the site of a "Pops" style concert on Labor Day from 1 to 3 p.m. The Commonwealth Woodwind Quintet, based in Tewksbury, will be performing in that September 5 concert on the common.

The Commonwealth Woodwind Quintet was established in 1979 and is well known through its concerts and educational programs in the New England area. The instruments involved in this Tewksbury based quintet are the flute, oboe, clarinet, basson and french horn.

The program will feature selections by Joplin and Sousa as well as other light entertaining pieces.

The audience is suggested to take lawn chairs, blankets and refreshments to make this first Tewksbury bandstand concert a true 'Pops' family event. This concert is supported in full by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council, as administered by the Tewksbury Arts Council.

The Commonwealth Woodwind Quintet was formed in 1979 by five young artists dedicated to performing woodwind music in an accessible and exciting way.

Since that time, the quintet has performed at the Gardner Museum in Boston, the University of Lowell, the Museum of Fine Arts and Roger Williams College. In addition, the quintet has a commitment to bringing classical music to children in an educational, participatory format. This commitment resulted in the quintet being funded in 1982 and 1983 by the Lowell Arts Council, to bring their programs to the Lowell public schools.

Mosquito spraying planned

Mosquito spraying will take place earlier this fall than originally aniticipated, according to Jack Lu, vice chairman of the Tewksbury Board of Health. The spraying will be held on September 3 between 6:00 and 8:00 a.m. In case of inclement weather, however, the spraying will be done between September 4 and 10.

According to Lu and Board of Health Director Bill Mc Menimen, sometimes the spraying does not occur until spring when it is annually done. The spraying has been advanced due to "the remote equine encephalitis threat that has arisen and the relatively large amount of swamp and wetland areas in Tewksbury." He also said that this spraying is not "a reaction to a crisis but merely an acceleration of a previously planned program."

Spraying occurs only in swamp areas, according to Lu and McMenimen, and costs about $3,000. There is no danger to pets or other animals either.

Lu reminds all residents to take precautions against mosquito bites, including liberal use of insect repellant and limiting exposed skin when outdoors.

The Tewksbury Board of Health will sponsor flu - pneumonia clinics as follows:

DiGregorio plans to increase TMHS attendance, decrease smoking

by Debbi Michals

High School Principal William DiGregorio is ready to initiate some tough plans to increase students' gradually declining attendance levels. He met with the school committee on August 24 to discuss this issue, as well as to outline some plans for smoking, alcohol, and drug information programs to help interested students eliminate these habits.

Under DiGregorio's attendance plan, students who are absent will be required to report to an assistant principal upon their return to school. The assistant principal will talk to the student about why he was absent to determine if the student missed school for a legitimate reason. If the absence is determined to be for good causes, the student will be permitted to return to classes and make up all work missed.

If the assistant principal decides that the absence was an illegal or illegitimate one, the student will automatically receive an in-house suspension and will not be allowed to make up any missed assignments or exams.

Once an absence is determined to be a legitimate one, students will be given a pass to present to teachers so he can be readmitted to his classes. The pass will ensure that students don't avoid meeting with an assistant principal before returning to classes. Staff members will be instructed, he said, to contact the office if they see any students roaming the corridors without a pass or legitimate excuse.

According to DiGregorio, attendance drops radically on half day workshops. To prevent this from recurring in the upcoming school year, teachers will be instructed to give exams and begin new material on half days. Two exams will be given every half day in designated courses, such as English and math on the first half day and science and history on the subsequent one. Classes not holding exams will be covering new material.

Students who miss half days for legitimate reasons will be allowed to make up exams or any missed work, but illegal absentees will not. He hopes this system will radically reduce student absenteeism on half days and throughout the year.

DiGregorio and the school committee also reviewed the smoking policy to determine whether it should continue with the nineth grade moving to the high school. Since 1980, the school committee and the high school administration has allowed smoking between classes in the courtyard area only.

According to DiGregorio and Assistant Principal Joseph Crotty, vandalism, fires, and fights have decreased since smoking was first permitted. DiGregorio said the old policy against smoking would have suspended or expelled all students caught smoking on school grounds. "Don't suspend (students) from education for a habit that is allowed in other areas of society," he added.

After a long discussion, including topics such as the difficulty of enforcing a no-smoking policy and the fact that all students are now able to use the bathrooms without being barraged by smoke, the school committee decided to continue to allow students to smoke in the designated courtyard area only.

At Chairman Tom Cooke's suggestion, however, the school department wants some awareness programs initiated at the high school on smoking, alcohol, and drugs. He that students receive plenty of education and information on these topics until eigth grade, but after that, the programs stop.

The best way to eliminate smoking is through education, DiGregorio explained, stating that the purpose of a school is to educate students, not to punish them for behavior that may be acceptable in other areas of society. He is considering requiring students in the media classes to produce a vignette on the harmfulness of alcohol, cigarettes, or drugs. These films will be shown on the widescreen t.v. located in the cafeteria during lunch hours. The high school principal and board members hope that these films will spur conversation on the subject between students and their peers.

DiGregorio also hopes to initiate voluntary in-school programs to help students quit the alcohol, cigarette, and drug habit.

Special voter registration Friday

Town Clerk Elizabeth Carey has announced that a special voter registration session will be conducted by the board of registrars on Friday, September 2, from 8:30 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. at the town hall.

In accordance with the Massachusetts General Laws, this is the last day and hour to register to vote to be able to participate in the upcoming special town meeting to be held on Wednesday, September 14, at 8:00 p.m. at Tewksbury Memorial High School, Pleasant Street.

Residents may also register to vote during regular office hours, which are Monday through Friday 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Tuesday evening from 7:00 to 8:30 p.m.

Telethon this weekend at Oakdale Mall

Oakdale Mall in Tewksbury will be a busy place during the Labor Day weekend. The mall will again serve as the area activity center for the Jerry Lewis Telethon on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Sept. 3, 4 and 5.

Organizers of the local event, the Northeast Firefighters Against Muscular Dystrophy, are calling the effort the "biggest and best to date." The organization includes firefighters from several towns, along with citizens and civic organizations.

All proceeds from the weekend go the Muscular Dystrophy Association, for research as well as the care of patients.

Activities for the three days include rides and games, with a prevailing carnival atmosphere. Booths sponsored by the Northeast Firefighters are a dart game, sponge toss, radar baseball throw, snow cones and cotton candy, and, of course, the dunk tank.

The annual favorite for many people is the auction, which will begin at noon on Sunday, and again at noon on Monday.

Monday promises to be the busiest day, with several personal appearances scheduled. Chet Curtis and Natalie Jacobsen are scheduled to arrive at 10 a.m. Bob Lobel and Bob Raleigh will arrive after noon. Matt Siegel will also visit on Monday.

Special guest Channel five anchorman Chet Curtis will make an appearance Monday morning at the Oakdale Mall for the Muscular Dystrophy Telethon. He is shown here with John Brown, chairman of the Northeast Firefighters Against Muscular Dystrophy.

Community Fund Walk-a-Thon set for September 25

The Wilmington Community Fund has set Sunday, Sept. 25 as the date for the 1983 Walk-a-Thon. This annual event will kick off the Community Fund's fund raising activities for the year.

All Wilmington residents from six to sixty are invited to walk the approximate 10 mile route starting at the common at 12:30 p.m.

Cancer Control Society to have booth at exposition

The Boston Chapter of Cancer Control Society (CCS) will sponsor an information booth at the Whole Life Times Exposition, Labor Day weekend Sept. 2-3-4. The Sheraton Hotel at the Prudential Center is hosting what promises to be the largest gathering of 'natural health' enthusiasts on the east coast.

Serving all of New England as well as local needs, the Boston Chapter is a subsidiary of the Cancer Control Society based in Los Angeles, California. A non-profit educational and research organization, CCS offers information to lay and professional persons who seek options in treatment for cancer and other diseases.

Advocating that cancer is a nutritional deficiency disease stemming from certain deficiencies and chemical imbalances within the body, CCS provides counseling to those seeking safe, optional therapy sources.

Books, tapes, healed patient lists, diet information and locations of doctors, hospitals, and clinics which advocate non-invasive, non-mutilating therapies are available.

Schedules of self-help courses and further information can be obtained by calling Cancer Control Society's Hotline, 657-8131.

Private vs. public schools – the controversy continues

by Debbi Michals

The quality of public education in Tewksbury has long been questioned, but with over 582 children leaving town schools in 1982-1983, the issue is even hotter than ever.

There are many reasons why parents send their children to private schools, reasons that vary with every child. High School Principal William DiGregorio outlined several, including the fact that there are many Catholics in Tewksbury who may choose to send their children to private, parochial schools for academic training that may be accompanied by a strong moral and religious code. He also said that many parents feel students at private schools all have the same goals, which often include college.

Many parents choose to send their children to private schools because of the allegedly more stringent discipline there. Others have had personal experiences with the Tewksbury school system that have left them disenchanted with the town's public schools, while other residents have been turned off to public education here because of isolated experiences or the past, not-so-good reputation of Tewksbury schools.

For example, Maureen Conway took her children out of public schools because she was dissatisfied with the level system at the junior and senior high schools. "If you're an average student," she explained, "they will do nothing for you."

Levels were first designed, she said, to teach students at paces that matched their ability; they were not supposed to be taught different material. This is not the case, however, Conway said. The top level students, level one, are required to do a project for the annual science fair, whereas the average student who may be in a lower level is not. More work is given to the accelerated students and less is given to average students, she complained. She said she never understood why the average students who really need to be pushed are allowed to go easier.

The last straw for her, however, was when her level one nephew had a required summer reading assignment, while her level three (under a five level system) daughter did not. "She was so thrilled about it," Conway added. "That's the part that bothered me the most. She should have been pushed more."

According to DiGregorio, that summer required reading assignment has been discontinued, though students in all levels have been given an optional list of books they might read during the summer.

In fairness to Tewksbury High School, parents should tour the school and review curriculum alternatives before choosing a school for their children. Since the construction of the addition to the high school, several new programs and courses have been added, many of which private schools can not financially afford to offer. Students of all levels and interests can find courses and programs to meet their needs and abilities.

It is no lie that in past years Tewksbury High had little more than basic courses in all subcts to offer its students. Above the level system and accelerated or simple business courses, there was not much else available to students. Now, however, all of that has changed. Students can take a media course, for example, that allows them to produce their own films to be aired to other students on a television in the cafeteria. All the equipment for the media course had been donated to the school from a local cable station.

The school now offers computer programs in several computer languages, where previously it only offered a basic course. There are also programs in food service, electronics, drafting, child care, and music, as well as the traditional, academic programs. DiGregorio said he is pleased that now in several areas, his school can keep pace with Shawsheen Tech in providing career training for some pupils.

Students interested in business can study word processing, a step above the typing courses that the school was barely able to provide in past years.

The renovations to Tewksbury High School have made quite a change in the quality and diversity of the education available to students there. But even before these renovations were made, Tewksbury High School was graduating quite an impressive group of students, many of whom went on to attend some of the best colleges and universities in this country.

Still, there are valid reasons why parents are willing to spend as much as $2,400 a year to send their children to private schools, and quite a few of these reasons deal primarily with bad personal experiences with the school system.

Kathy Nelson, for example, lives in a section of Shawsheen Street that is constantly redistricted. One year, she explained, her children will attend the Shawsheen and Heath Brook Schools, and the next year they will be sent to the North Street School to balance the populations in those buildings. The constant moving, topped with the fact that teachers at the various schools tended to present similar topics in very different ways, forced her to finally take her children out of the Tewksbury school system.

Another mother, who preferred not to be identified, said she was disillusioned by the constant complaints made by teachers about how difficult it is for them to discipline students. "My doctor, when he takes care of me, has to be in full concentration of his obligation to me," she said. "When you are a school teacher, you have to be a professional. If they can't or don't know how to handle a child, they shouldn't be teaching."

Despite all the complaints made by parents against the school system, none of their problems match those faced by Janet Tosto of Patten Road.

Tosto, mother of five, has sent at least four of her children to Tewksbury schools. Two graduated from the high school and attend Providence College in Rhode Island and Purdue University in Indiana respectively. One son recently graduated from Shawsheen Tech and has enlisted with the U.S. Air Force, while another son still attends public schools. But her youngest, Christopher, 9, only completed kindergarten at the Heath Brook School. Since then, he has been enrolled at St. Stanislaus in Lowell.

Her final decision to send Christoper to St. Stanislaus was the result of several factors. She said her two children who are in college had difficulty during their first years there because they hadn't developed any real study habits and could not write properly. She attributes this to the fact that they had little or no homework at Tewksbury schools that could even compare to what they would face when they got to college.

Another big push for Tosto came when she heard one of her sons studying with a friend. One of the boys asked what "heresy" means, and the other one replied, "I don't know. Look it up on the map. After looking at a map, the first one said, "There's a Hershey here, but no heresy."

"And I watched this," Tosto explained, "and I thought, 'This is the culmination of nine or ten years in Tewksbury schools.'"

The last straw for Tosto came when her youngest son was put in the special needs 766 program at the Heath Brook School while he was still in kindergarten. She said she was told he had a learning disability because he couldn't pronounce the letter "s" and had difficulty using scissors.

"I felt he was going to be pitch and hold always (in the school system), but I knew my son, and I knew he was intelligent."

The public schools wanted him to stay in 766 even if he went on to private school, but Tosto and her husband were against it. When Christopher got to St. Stanislaus, a nun there worked with him, and now he no longer has any learning problems. Tosto said he always brings home A's and B's.

"If I kept him in public school, he would still be in 766 and never have gone anywhere," she said. "I felt that 766 was a worthwhile program, but being that it's funded, they have to have so many students."

At a final meeting with public school officials, Tosto said she knew she made the right decision. Some of the administrators were seriously trying to convince her and her husband to keep their son in the 766 program at St. Stanislaus, and when they refused, someone said, "Put on his record that his parents refuse to help him." She said she was totally disenchanted with the school system once that remark was made.

Now, Tosto is bitter about public education. "He'll never see a public school," she said about Christopher, "even if I have to wash windows at the John Hancock Tower, and that's saying a lot because I'm afraid of heights."

Despite all of this, private school officials don't claim that their schools offer any programs that can not be found in public schools. One of the few big differences in a private school, said Sister Theresa Forest of St. Joseph's High School in Lowell, is the parents.

"Parents, since they are paying to send their children to school, cooperate more. A majority of the parents are very interested (in their children's education)," she said.

According to DiGregorio, parental involvement is one of the key problems he faces at Tewksbury High. "If parents supervise their child, know where he is at all times, develop a moral code, and are interested in his education, then there is no difference between private or public school students."

Parents who send their children to private school are not only paying for that education, but they are paying for it twice. First, and most obviously, they pay tuition and book fees. Students at private schools almost always have to buy their own books.

Second, and most importantly, they are paying through their tax rate for a public school education that their child is entitled to but never receives. According to the town assessor's office, homeowners are assessed $20.90 for every $1,000 that their home and property are evaluated for. Over 50 percent of that money goes to fund public schools. A person whose house and property is valued at $50,000, for example, pays approximately $1,100 per year in property taxes to the town, over $550 of which is used for education. And legally, whether a resident has children or not, or whether his children attend town schools or not, he must pay those taxes.

Of course, it costs considerably more than $550 to educate every public school student. In many cases it costs more than double the tuition paid by parents for private schools. It will cost approximately $2,400 to educate each student during the 1983-1984 school year, a figure that includes the cost of heating, electricity, teachers, and supplies, according to John Ryan, assistant superintendent for business for Tewksbury schools. Tuition at St. Joseph's High School is only $825 per student, plus an average of $50 per pupil for books. The tuition money at private schools almost always makes up the majority of funding at those institutions.

According to Ryan, there will be approximately 4,300 students in Tewksbury schools during the upcoming school year. It will cost the school department $202,080 to bus children out of town to private schools, a service the Tewksbury School Committee has been providing for years. No other area towns provide busing for private school students. If, however, the 582 students who attend private schools came back to public schools, the cost to the school system would be approximately $2,396,800 to educate them, based on Ryan's estimated $2,400 per student figure.

A major advantage to private education can be found in their college placement records. Sister Theresa Forest said St. Joseph's places 60 percent of their students in colleges, which is 100 percent of their total student population who are interested in college. Father Thomas Kenny of Austin Prep, a school with a tuition fee of $2,475 per year, boasts a 97-98 percent placement rate.

Of course, students have to pass entrance exams to get into these private high schools in the first place. Since they are labeled college preparatory schools, they admit only those students who are academically able to handle their highly scholastic curriculum.

Tewksbury High School's college placement rate is not one to scoff at. In fact, it is basically the same as the one St. Joseph's holds. "Do you rate a school on college palcement or on how it meets the goals of students?" DiGregorio asked. "Not all students have a goal to go on to college. Tewksbury High School (unlike private schools) is a comprehensive high school with a student population that reflects all aspects of our community and all career, vocational goals, so we must offer all things as best we can to all students who have those goals."

Finally, a big issue of contention in the private vs. public education controversy centers on discipline. Private schools have been credited with having better and more stringent discipline. Nobody denies that this reputation is valid, but it is important to examine the reasons why private schools have a better disciplined student body.

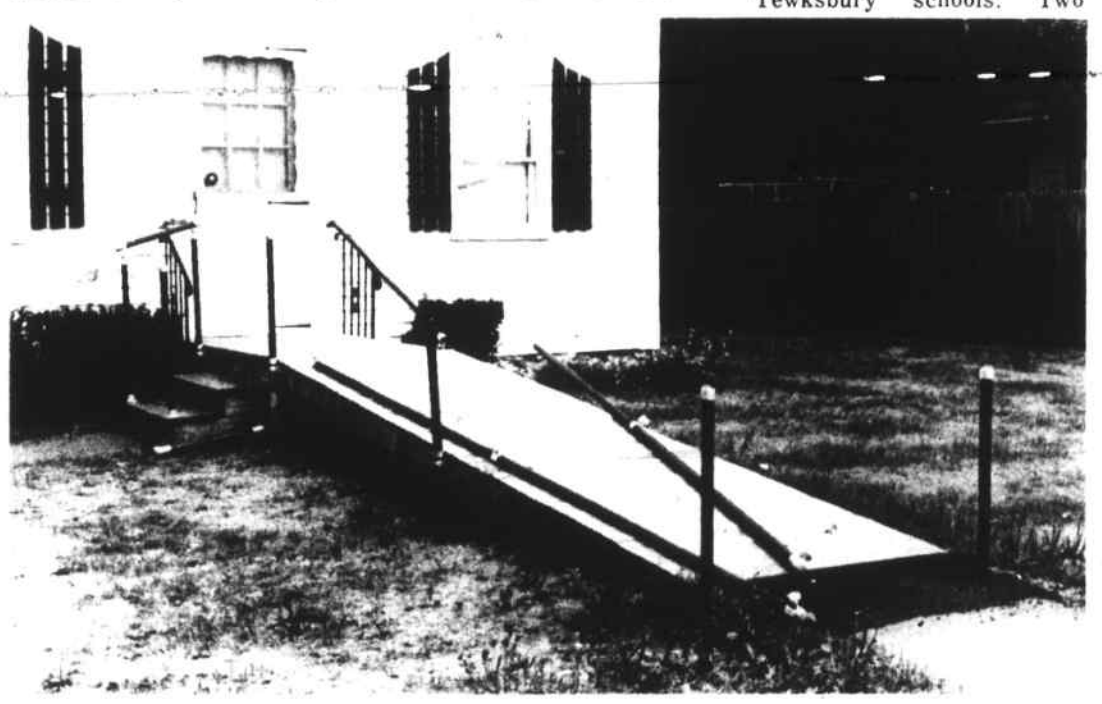

First of all, as DiGregorio points out and private school officials don't deny, any recurring disciplinary problems at a private school are remanded back to public school. In other words, private schools have the luxury of expelling or removing problem students. Public schools, on the other hand, are legally liable to provide education to all students and can not deny a student an education because he may have a behavior problem.

Since private schools can eliminate their discipline problems, they have none. These problems get passed on to public schools. "Public schools, too," said DiGregorio, "reflect the community at large, and if there are problems in town, they are reflected in the schools.

"Students whose parents almost always know where they are and what they are doing have much better conduct in school and are much less likely to be delinquent out of school," he added, quoting a November 1982 study on education.

The issue of private vs. public education is a complex one, since both types of education have their strong and weak points. Private education, for example, isolates children from seeing the whole spectrum of people from other religious, moral, and economic backgrounds. Students at private schools seem to be from similar backgrounds, and in many cases may even be of the same gender.

"The controversy about private and public education will always be," said DiGregorio, "but the question (for parents) is, 'What do I want for my child exclusive of an education?' Every school can teach math, science, social studies, and English, but there are other things in education such as social - personal relationships, moral codes, leadership, competing in a large school, understanding the different viewpoints of students from different backgrounds...Thats all a part of education, too, and those are the questions that (parents) have to answer."

Vandalism Vandals broke the railings on the ramp at the Wilmington Fourth of July Headquarters sometime Monday night. The ramp, installed earlier this year, makes the building accessible to handicapped persons — which in Wilmington is almost unique.

St. Williams celebrates 100th birthday

By proclamation of Governor Michael Dukakis, the last week in September is to be Oblate Fathers Week in Massachusetts.

To the 2300 families of St. Williams Parish, Tewksbury, and their friends, such a proclamation is welcome, but not wholly necessary. They have been preparing for several weeks now, for the event. In that week, they will be celebrating the 100th birthday of the Oblate Fathers Novitiate, in Tewksbury, and of St. William's Church.

In fact the celebration began two weeks ago, with a candlelight ceremony in which many participated. There was a mass August 15 to celebrate the Feast of the Assumption, followed by the candlelight procession.

Dave and Judy McCarthy of Foster Road are the coordinators of the Oblate Fathers Week. Their's is the overall planning for the event. Many individual events are being planned. Church organizations and guest organizations will be participating.

There is to be a mass, best described as a Homecoming Mass, September 25, probably at 9 a.m. Priests who have served in St. William's in past years will be the guests.

On that same Sunday the St. William's Parade is to take place. It will start at 1 p.m. on the grounds of Tewksbury Hospital, a hospital which has been served by Oblate Fathers since 1869. The choosing of the hospital for the beginning of the parade is not an accident.

There are those in that hospital who would not see the parade unless it were to be on the grounds.

Six or seven marching bands will participate, together with many organizations. The parade, it is estimated at this time, will be over two miles long. Paul Marchessault of Shawsheen Street is the organizer of the parade, and will be the parade marshall.

There is to be a brief ceremony at the hospital, at which the superintendent, Paul Saunders will speak. The parade will then march to the center, and then up Main Street to Chandler Street and to the Novitiate grounds. A reviewing stand is to be erected at the Novitiate.

Memorial services are to be held in the Oblate Cemetery, after the review. The services will be followed by a barbecue on the Novitiate grounds.

It will be a chicken barbecue, also organized by Paul Marchessault. There will be many kinds of entertainment and many different styles of music to be enjoyed. Both vocal and instrumental music is being planned for the enjoyment of all age groups.

A Trentine mass will be celebrated at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 27. That is the Latin mass which has been discontinued, after 400 years by Vatican II.

The Rev. Father Joseph Blaney is happy to report that many of the parishioners still know the Latin responses. The mass will be preceded by a talk about the mass, and an explanation of the differences in the old and new mass.

All three choirs of St. William's are to participate in the mass, including the childrens' choir. The youngsters are now learning the traditional Latin responses for the mass.

Thursday evening at 7:30 Professor Thomas Wangler of Boston College will speak in the upper church. He is the Professor of History at Boston College, and is speaking at the request of Father Blaney.

Both the Novitiate and St. William's Church are to be open for guided tours during the entire week. This will include the display of historical and other memoriabilia.

The evening of October 1 there is to be a dinner dance. It will be held at Tewksbury - Wilmington Elks hall. All the priests who have served at St. William's over the years have been invited. John Gleason is to be the master of ceremonies.

The dinner is to be in charge of Mrs. Barry (Gail) Tresslor of Marcia Jean Drive.

The Interfaith Choir of all Tewksbury churches, is to sing at St. William's on Sunday, October 2. The choir is well known and appreciated by Tewksbury residents. Norman DeMarais will be director.

Pastor Father Joseph Blaney, O.M.I., the pastor of St. Williams Church, is shown at the front door of the rectory.

Grand marshall Paul Marchessault, an active worker at St. Williams, will be the grand marshall of the anniversary parade. He is shown at another of his church-related jobs.

Palmer well after suffering from chest pains

Wilmington Highway Supt. Bob Palmer was taken to Choate Memorial Hospital in Woburn on Sunday, suffering from chest pains.

On Tuesday, a family member said that tests had shown that there had been no heart attack. His heartbeat was normal and his blood pressure was down. Further tests were scheduled.

Ironically, Sunday was Bob's 50th birthday. On Saturday, his family held a surprise party for him.

Wilmington Tennis Club

Junior Tourney wraps up summer

The Wilmington Tennis Club recently wrapped up its' Junior Division activity this summer with the annual Junior Tournament. Over 25 youngsters took part in the boys and girls divisions.

The tournament showed some new stars as well as firmly establishing a few of last year's heroes. Steven Cutone is still without a doubt the number one junior player in Wilmington. He won the division one section with a convincing win over Bobby Seville (6-3, 6-1) in the finals.

Both these players ended up in the same positions on the boys' ladder. Steven may be ready for the mens' ladder next year, since he had an easy time of it, only losing four games in the tourney.

Two strong ladder players, number four seed Mark Edy, and number five ladder player Jim Magliozzi, ran into the Cutone steamroller. Mark lost to Steven in the semis and Jim also lost to Steven in the second round. Jim had beaten a promising newcomer, Mike Forester in the first round.

Mark Kwiatkowski won an exciting first round match in three sets over a very tough John Medeiros, but then could not prevail in the heat, losing the next match to Mark Eddy.

Bobby Seville did not have such an easy time of it in the bottom half of the draw. Mike Pittaro nearly pulled off the upset of the day, taking Bobby to a third set tiebreaker in the semifinals. Mike had a tough time in his first match against a gritty Brian Savosik, winning 7-6, 7-1.

John Gillis showed that he is ready to play on ladders next year by playing a good match with Bobby Seville in the first round. Bobby won 6-1, 6-3.

The girls' tournament was won by a newcomer to the club, Tina Favero. Tina preservered in a grueling three set match over the girls' ladder champ Claire O'Beirne. Claire, as well as Cindy Degerly, let Tina know that it would be tough winning matches on the girls' ladder. Both Claire in the finals and Cindy in the semifinals lost to Tina in third set tiebreakers.

Second place ladder winner Lynne Newhouse played well, but ran into Claire in the semifinals and lost a tough match (6-2, 6-4). Ladder players Maureen O'Leary and Kristen Curran played well, but lost to Tina and Cindy in the quarterfinals.

The Boys' Division II tournament demonstrated some strong young talent. It showed that with a little effort (and a lot of practice) you can make it to the big time.

Paul DeFronzo emerged victorious after four exciting matches (three on Saturday), by beating Eric Eisenberg in the finals (6-4, 6-2). Paul was nearly eliminated in the first round by the strong play of Steven Edmonds, winning 7-6, 7-5. He then beat two determined up-and-coming players, Chris Ward and Steven Killilea in the next two rounds. Eric, Chris and Steven had been practicing four hours a day over the past two weeks, and if it wasn't for Paul they would have monopolized the tourney.

Ladder player Joe McFadyn gave Steven Killilea a scare in one of the best matches of the day, losing 6-2, 6-7, 7-5. Another ladder player, Brian Gillespie played well, making it to the semifinals.

Eddie Beaudoin, Kevin Barrett and newcomer John Molloy also played well this weekend and should do well next year on the Junior Boys' ladder.

Views On Dental Health

By RANDALL SMITH, D.D.S.

Burlington. Phone: 272-0540.

DON'T IGNORE CAVITIES

"Look, Ma, only two small cavities?" Sounds good? Don't kid yourself. If you could look THROUGH each cavity-marked tooth, however, you'd probably see that a lot more damage has been done than meets the eye. When a cavity first appears, the enamel of the tooth has already been damaged, but below the enamel, the bacteria that caused the cavity in the first place may have multiplied and begun attacking the dentin or core of the tooth.

If you continue to ignore the cavity, the disease process continues until the bacteria start attacking the pulp or nerve of the tooth. By this time you will begin to realize the extent of the damage because you will begin to feel the pain of toothache. Unfortunately, by then it may not be possible to save the tooth.

Don't ignore any cavity, no matter how small and inconsequential it may appear, not if you want to save your teeth. Early treatment by your dentist and regular checkups are the only ways to protect your dental health.

Shop at L.L. Bean's

The Wilmington Recreation Department is planning another exciting bus trip for local residents. The Newport tour attracted approximately 200 responses. That trip is full and will take place September 17.

The L.L. Bean trip will take place the following Saturday, Sept. 24. The trip, which will cost $12 for transportation, will include a motorcoach ride directly to Bean's famous outdoor sport and recreation facility in the village of Freeport, Maine. Other 'walk to' attractions include factory outlet stores Hathaway Shirts, Dansk, Ralph Lauren, Buttons and Things, Sheets and Towels and Frye Leather.

The bus group will then head directly to South Portland's famous Newick's Seafood Restaurant - a favorite of many Wilmington seafood lovers. The group will then head for Old Orchard Beach for a brief stretch and stroll along the famous pier and ocean front. The trip will leave Wilmington High School at 8 a.m. and will arrive back home by 6:30 p.m.

An added bonus will be the fall foliage which should be near peak along the rock bound coast of Maine.

Fall programs

Sign-up for fall recreation programs will take place in the Recreation Office Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 21 and 22 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 6 to 8 p.m., and thereafter on weekdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Fall activities include: basketball, mens' gym, ladies fitness, swim lessons, scuba lessons, New York City Christmas shopping, L.L. Bean, and Old Orchard trip, Universal exercise, gymnastics, baton, modeling and finishing, Barnum and Bailey Circus, roller skating, roller skating lessons, tennis clinics, punt-pass and kick, horribles parade, Benson's Christmas trip, record hops, clogging, Thanksgiving Turkey Race, special kids Benson's trip and discount coupons for Florida and New England attractions. Complete details will be coming soon.

$1,000 for Red Cross

Wilmington Recreation again this August collected a large amount of donated pledges for the support of the Lowell Red Cross Chapter. The funds were raised through the Swim-A-Cross program held at Shawsheen Tech Wednesday, August 17.

All swim volunteers procure pledges for each length of the pool they swim. Debbie Metcalf raised an individual sum of $156. Many other recreation swimmers raised over $25 each, thus earning their own Swim-A-Cross T-shirts.

Recreation swimming instructors Laurie Buzzell and Sandy Craig, both of whom took great pride in the fundraising effort, are hoping for an even larger sum in next year's event.

Sign-up with Sean and Joanie O'Beirne, 658-9740.

The mixed doubles is scheduled for September 24 and 25. Sign-up with Bruce and Judy Conant, 658-9531.

Each tournament costs $3.00 to enter. All Wilmington residents are welcome to take part, but must pay the club membership fee of $5.00. This will entitle them to all club privileges.

Partners for the doubles tournaments will be drawn at random. For information, call director Wendell Holmes at 658-8358.

Wilmington Figure Skating Club

The Wilmington Figure Skating Club, a sanctioned United States Figure Skating Association Club located off Route 125 in Wilmington, is about to embark on its 16th season, offering a program both for the beginner-recreational skater and for those who have progressed to the patch-freestyle skating skill levels.

The club, although located in Wilmington, is open to all interested skaters from all communities north of Boston.

The badge program, designed primarily for the beginner-recreation skater, is a step by step learning program that awards colorful badges for the successful completion of each of the 12 skill levels.

Along with the group lessons given by a competent staff of volunteer instructors, the club will again offer group lessons with the staff of professional instructors. Space is limited and available on a first-come basis.

Classes are at the Wilmington Youth Ice Arena Tuesdays from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. and-or Wednesdays from 4:20 to 5:20 p.m., starting September 20 and 21.

For those skaters wanting private instruction from the excellent staff of professional instructors, the club has set aside over 10 hours of ice time each week specifically for the patch and freestyle skater.

The club is aware that there is confusion over these skating times and just what is involved in progressing through the different levels of skating skills. To help eliminate some of this confusion, the public is invited to a special open house September 13 at 5:30 p.m. and September 14 at 4:20 p.m., for demonstrations given by skaters who are actively engaged in each program level, and to view a video tape of the club's 1982 skating show. There will also be skaters and some of the professional staff available to answer questions about the program and figure skating in general.

In anticipation of those planning to join the club this year, the Wilmington Figure Skating Club will sponsor a skate and accessory sale the week of September 13 to help outfit the skaters for the coming season.

Wilmington Little League registration

Wilmington Little League will hold its' baseball and softball registrations for all divisions Sept. 7, 8 and 9 from 6:30-8 p.m at Rotary Park.

All youngsters must be accompanied by a parent and bring a copy of his or her birth certificate.

Red roof but no blue lights

Wilmington Safety Officer Bobby Shelley this year has a cruiser with a red vinyl top, thanks to Wilmington Ford. The car is leased to the town for a token fee. Off. Shelley is shown accepting the keys from Mike Restuccia.

A small but smelly flood

A small "flood" occurred on Monday morning at the Wilmington's new sewage dumping station, off Main Street near the Town Park.

A "honey wagon" from Tewksbury had begun dumping into the pipe when the driver and the attendant discovered that the sewage was flowing onto the ground. The pipe was clogged — not the large 36-inch sewer main, but the 10-inch pipe leading into it.

When the pipe was cleaned, a piece of wood, combined with other solid wastes, was discovered to be the cause of the blockage.

How the wood got into the sewer pipe is not known.

Schools opening - drive carefully

Children in Wilmington return to school next week, and Police Safety Officer Bob Shelley joins AAA Massachusetts in urging motorists to drive extra carefully.

"Many children in kindergarten and first grade will be coping with traffic on their own for the first time," said Officer Shelley, "They may not be aware of pedestrian safety rules."

Officer Shelley had some advice for concerned motorists. "Safe driving is a year-round responsibility, but it's even more important as schools open," he said. "Keep alert and always obey the posted speed limit, but especially in school zones. That will make it easier to come to a quick, safe stop if a child darts into your path."

As part of its annual "School's Open" safety campaign, AAA Massachusetts and the Wilmington Police Department are distributing "School's Open - Drive Carefully" bumper stickers.

Photon makes final distribution

The following story was published in the Aug. 26 issue of Type World, a newspaper covering the typesetting industry. Type World is published in Wilmington by Sam Blum.

Photon, Inc. was located at 355 Middlesex Ave., North Wilmington from the mid-1960's until 1974, when the firm went bankrupt. The plant is now a a division of Itek.

Photon, Inc. Lives . . . On

Last month creditors of Photon, Inc., which filed bankruptcy proceedings in 1974, received checks "representing a final dividend of approximately 4.23% of the amount of (their) claims."

To many, this action "writes 30" to just another company name in our industry. We think not. The Photon name represents both people and products that have made lasting and significant contributions to the typesetting industry.

Historically, the first phototypesetter was Harris-Intertype's Fotosetter, which was simply a modified hot metal machine. It had minor commercial acceptance.

The first commercial phototypesetter was brought to market by Photon in the mid-1950's. It was based on 1944 inventions of two French engineers, Rene Higgonet and Louis Moyroud. Their concept provided for character selection from a spinning disk font by timed firing of a xenon flash lamp. In 1948, these two combined forces with William Garth, who was affiliated with Lithomat Sales of Cambridge, MA. Together the three were instrumental in the establishment of the Graphic Arts Research Foundation (GARF). It's goal was to develop the Higgonet-Moyroud Typesetter. In 1952, Photon, Inc. was established in Wilmington, MA to manufacture and market what can really be termed the first "second generation" phototypesetter.

A succession of significant products followed: Photon 100 ('54); 200A ('56); 500 Series ('59); Zip ('63); 560 ('63); 713 ('64); AM 725 ('68), which was designed and made for AM by Photon; the Pacesetter Series ('71); and the Econosetter ('75). Photon also marketed a digitized CRT typesetter originated by Alphanumeric; it was sold by Photon as the 7000 CRT, and by Autologic, as the APS-4.

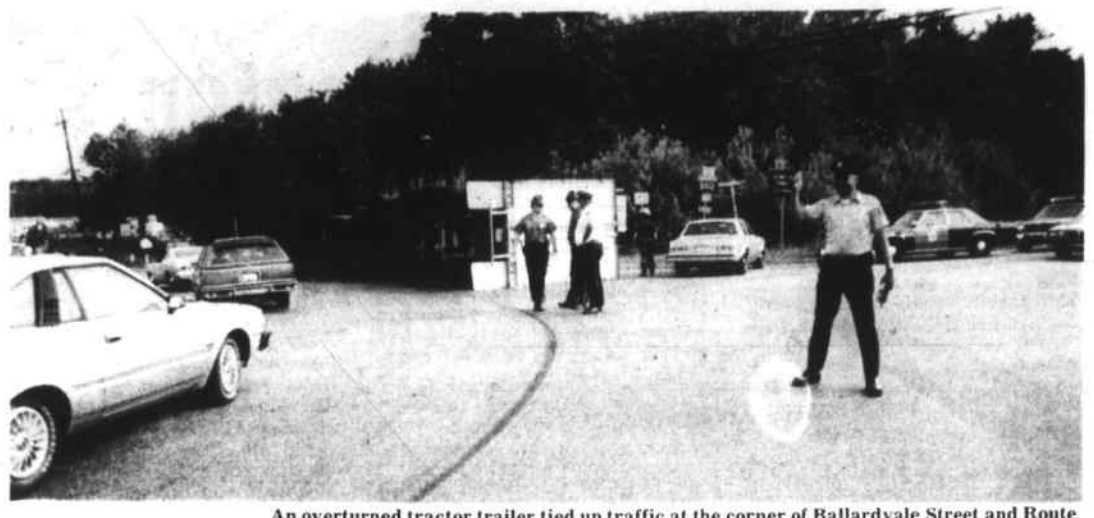

Significant, too, is Photon's development of both a domestic and international library of typefaces designed specifically for photocomposition. In the 50's and 60's their photocomp library was the largest and strongest in the industry.

In April 1975, Dymo Industries bought the assets of Photon and continued to market the Pacesetter/Econosetter lines under the Dymo Graphic System's name. Soon after the acquisition, Dymo introduced the Dymo Laser Composer, which was under prior development by Photon — another first in the industry, although it bombed. Dymo has since been sold to Essellte AB and then Itek.

We estimate that about 10,000 typesetters and related products with a Photon genealogy have come to market since 1953. Most are or are nearing the end of their product cycle life. However, many of the Pacesetters — considered "work horses" in the industry — are still in active service.

Just last week we had a call from the head of a major state printing office. The essence of the call was that he thought it was time to upgrade his typesetting operation. Included in his equipment complement are 8-year-old Econosetters. We're confident this is not an isolated case.

For whatever reason Photon failed from a business standpoint, we feel its originators and their successors conceived and developed products that made milestone contributions to the typesetting industry. Last month, the 1975 Photon creditors may have gotten their final settlements, but our close-knit industry will continue to reap the benefits contributed by Photon for many years to come.

Tipped trailer ties up traffic

'For want of a visa, babies were lost'

by Judith Myers

There is a nursery rhyme that goes

For want of a nail the shoe was lost,
For want of a shoe the horse was lost,
For want of a horse the rider was lost,
For want of a rider the battle was lost,
For want of a battle the kingdom was lost,
And all for the want of a horshoe nail.

Now substitute for the shoe, the horse, the rider, and the battle, "visa," "director," "adoption agency," and "babies." Because for want of a visa, an American woman heading an adoption agency in the state of West Bengal, India, may have to leave her job, and on that job hang the futures of many destitute Indian children. That agency is the International Mission of Hope (IMH) and it is located in Calcutta — dubiously distinguished as the world's dirtiest city.

The scenario is one Christa and Elliot Brown of Burlington hope won't come about, and one they are working hard to prevent. Adoptive parents already of two Indian girls — Laurel, 6, and Kirsten, 3 — the Browns expect newborn Nathaniel to arrive from IMH within a few weeks. Through their association with IMH for Nathaniel's adoption, the Browns learned of the plight of its director, Cherie Clark-Prakash.

TRANSMIGRATION OF SOULS

From an American perspective, adoption seems a good and natural partial solution to dealing with India's many abandoned babies and children, the Browns point out. Indians, however, don't all see it that way. For one reason, their Hindu religion teaches that while a person may now be living in the basest of circumstances, in a future life he or she, as part of the "transmigration of souls," can hope for something better. Furthermore, so bad is the poverty in places in India that adults often will organize bands of waifs, perhaps maimed so that they appear even more pathetic, to beg for them. "It can be politically hazardous to be in favor of adoption agencies in India," Elliot Brown says.

It is in such a milieu that Mrs. Clark-Prakash's IMH has been struggling to operate since August, 1977. And it has been doing splendidly. With no steady source of funding and relying only on donations and fees paid by adoptive parents (about $2,000 per child) IMH has built up the best neo-natal care facility in Calcutta. Its staff of about 70 cares for the 40 to 45 infants usually in IMH's care. Each year, IMH places about 150 babies with families in the U.S. Since 1978, it has sent 26 babies to Massachusetts. Christa Brown notes that in 1978, the year in which they adopted their older daughter (from another agency), only 175 children came to the entire U. S. from all agencies in India.

The babies IMH works with are the most helpless and desitute of Calcutta, a letter the Browns received points out. Babies are born under the most impoverished circumstances, with deliveries unhygienic and often the result of labor induced in the seventh or eighth month of the mother's pregnancy. The babies may spend up to 24 hours of life unfed and undressed before IMH receives them. Since Indians do not abandon their children with the frequency that is found in Oriental countries, a child who comes to IMH does so under the most drastic of family circumstances. Abandoned almost immediately after birth, rarely weighing more than four pounds, these are infants about whom IMH does not have and never will have any information other than their existence.

"BABIES SOLD"

In August, 1982 IMH suffered a terrible setback. For reasons still unclear, except perhaps for sensationalism, a British newspaper called The London Mail on Sunday (similar to The Enquirer or The Star in the U.S.), came out with a story under the headline, "Calcutta Babies Sold in U.S.A." Beneath a photo of IMH, the article went on to accuse the agency of taking babies from Calcutta slums and selling them in the U.S. The Associated Press then picked up the story.

An inquiry into the matter was immediately begun by India's Supreme Court, while at the same time IMH brought suit against the parent company of the Mail and against AP. About six weeks after the initial accusation, it was announced on the floor of Parliament in India that IMH had been absolved of charges. IMH's integrity was also backed up by a letter of support from U.S. Ambassador to India Henry G. Barnes, Jr. and, later, by one of the American General Counsul in Calcutta, George F. Sherman.

In mid October, 1982, however, Mrs. Clark-Prakash was suddenly informed that she had 72 hours in which to leave the country. In India on a tourist visa, she has never been able to obtain a permanent residency visa. West Bengal, the only communist state in an otherwise democratic India, is vehemently against the U.S. and thus will not, on principle, grant the document. The disproven scandal offers the government a convenient excuse for its stance. A slew of cables from families like the Browns, sent directly to India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi last October, resulted at that time in a temporary stay for Mrs. Clark-Prakash from the regional High Court in Calcutta.

But it is only on this tenuous basis, really at the whim of a single judge, that Mrs. Clark-Prakash has been staying in India for the past 10 months. And this is why the Browns are once again doing their part in the greater Burlington area. They figure Mrs. Clark-Prakash has until this coming autumn to obtain a permanent visa, at which time whe will have to leave once and for all. With her would go considerable experience (no one currently is in line to succeed her), needed continuity, and invaluable Indian and international contacts.

APPEAL TO CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

Given West Bengal's antipathy toward the U.S., the Browns explain, the one avenue to pursue for granting of the visa is an appeal to India's Central Government in New Delhi, which could supercede the West Bengal state government.

So, all across the U.S., friends of the Indian community and of IMH have been writing to West Bengal's Chief Minister and its Home Secretary, to the Under-Secretary of the Americas Division of the External Affairs Ministry in New Delhi, to Indira Gandhi, and to the Indian ambassador to the U.S. — key people in the approval-granting process. Supporters also have written to their respective U.S. senators. The Browns estimate they have solicited about 50 letter-writers themselves; perhaps several hundred more letter-writers have joined in nationwide.

And what would it matter if one small adoption agency amidst India's thousands of poor went under? As Elliot Brown says, "Nothing more than that x number of kids would die or enter the demi-monde of begging and illness." Or, as IMH's literature puts it, "No one can put a price tag on a human life. There is so much perfection in a newborn child, no matter where he or she comes from."

Want to help? You can call the Browns at 273-1819 for more information. Otherwise, for want of a visa, babies were lost.

People-watching in rush hour traffic!

dan ferullo

A reader from Wakefield who travels to and from work in Boston via Rtes. 128 and 93 each day recently made the following observations:

When I was a theatre arts student at B.U. during the early seventies, an acting professor assigned me and my fellow fledgling actors to go to a nearby Hayes-Bickford restaurant to observe the patrons. The purpose of this assignment was pick out a particular patron, study every detail of his character down to the tiniest nuance — the way he sat at the food counter drinking coffee (did he slouch like a sackful of old rags, or did he sit up as straight as one of those concrete and steel columns that connect the upper and lower decks of the expressway?), the way he moved when he got up to use the men's room (did he mope along at a snail's pace, with his shoulders slumped forward like a martyr who's about to be fed to the lions, or did he glide briskly, like a man who's rushing to his first date with Jacqueline Bissett?), the way he spoke (did he have an accent, an impediment? Did he mumble and grumble, like a man who's disgusted with life, or did he articulate with impeccable speech, like a teacher making a coffee pit stop on his way to class?), the way he regarded the world around him (did he stare steadfastly in one direction, as if afraid to see or be seen by another living soul, or did he suck in the cacophonous activities of those around him with sprite enthusiasm and zealous curiosity?), the way he was dressed (was he sloven; or spruced up like one of those too-perfect-looking manneguins in one of the windows of Louis' men's shop?) — and then recreate that character in the classroom.

Hayes-Bickford's was an urban outpost brimful of offbeat, dayglow characters, any one of which would have been an ideal subject for a people-watching dilettante to study and then to model himself after as he transformed himself into a stage role. The starkly bland food emporiums with their long, cold and hard Formica counters just seemed to attract unusual-looking and acting individuals. Now I'm convinced there's an even better place in which to discover a potpourri of bizarre characters (acting students, take notice). That place — of all places — is in early morning, Boston-bound rush-hour commuter traffic on Rtes. 128 and 93. If you're like me, and you travel back and forth to work on those busy highways daily, you may have become so accustomed to the guy driving next to you that you couldn't describe his facial features seconds after he's passed you. Some of my training in character study made an unexpected resurgence the other morning, just as I finished plugging my way onto Rte. 93 from the Rte. 128 cloverleaf, and here are a few of the characters I encountered:

First there was the perfect couple. You know the type: the husband and wife who drive to work together. He's in his fifties, with lots of salt running through a thick crop of wavy hair. She's got that just-stepped-out-of-the-hairdresser's coiffure look. They both have stunning tans, the kind you get only on three week vacations to the Greek islands, and incidentally, they ride to work in a shiny white Coup de Ville.

The antithesis of the perfect couple has to be the arguing couple. They don't have tidy hairdos, but it doesn't matter, because they're both constantly running their hands through their hair in frustration. I often wonder why more accidents don't occur when couples argue as they drive. He's driving and seldom has his eyes on the road, while she has her eyes on the road but never bothers to let her husband know that the truck fifty feet ahead of them has just come to a screeching halt. The arguing couple doesn't drive to work in a Coup de Ville. They tend to be in Dodge Darts. Oh, yes, their faces have lots of color too, but not from basking in the Greek sun.

Car pools seem to be made up mostly of men. And what do men do when they get together, besides talk sports, politics and the stock market? They check out the young blonde creeping up beside them in the car in the next lane, that's what. After they've spotted one girl, they tend to behave like a pack of hungry wolves, weaving in and out of lanes in search of new prey. It's best to steer clear of car pools made up of men, since you never know when they're going to cut you off to get a gander at that foxy brunette in the MGB that just whipped by you.

Then there's the guy who's trying to eat his donut and drink his coffee on the way to work, instead of waiting till he arrives at work. These characters weave a lot also. They are constantly spilling coffee and crumbs all over themselves, and in the habit of taking their eyes off the road for extended periods of time. Best to avoid the donut-eating drivers as well.

Another best bet is to remain well behind or well ahead of the woman driver who puts her make-up on in the car on her way to the office. This can be deadly, since I for one have never met a female who's satisfied with the way she looks right after she's finished putting on her paint. Her frustration may manifest itself in the form of a kamakazi-style run at the rear end of your car.

I get a big kick out of the drivers who play chicken with animals that accidentally stray across a busy highway. These drivers think they're on the dodge 'em track at an amusement park, and forget that the fenders they

C.P.R. for dogs and cats

By Keith H. Hopkins, D.V.M.
Director, Veterinary Medicine
Animal Resuce League of Boston

Training programs in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) are offered widely throughout New England, but thousands of people who are trained in these life-saving skills each year may not realize that these same techniques can be used to save the lives of pets as well as people.

If your dog or cat appears to be lifeless after nearly drowning, or receiving an electric shock, or having an allergic reaction to an insect bite, the availability of a CPR-trained person nearby can mean the difference between life and death.

Basically, the techniques are identical to those used for people, although the difference in animal anatomy requires a few adjustments. First of all, check to see that air passages are clear and reach with your finger into the throat to remove any obstructions. If the animal has been submerged in water, it should be held upside down to let water drain out of the mouth. Then, either force air into the lungs through the nostrils, or cup your hand around the muzzle and force air into the mouth (be careful because the shape of the muzzle can allow air to escape). About every ten seconds, take a deep breath and force air in, then remove your mouth to let air out. The chest should rise when air is forced in.

A second person working simultaneously at heart massage completes the life-saving team. The animal should be placed on its right side on a firm surface, then place one hand under the dog, and the other on top, and squeeze firmly then release. Repeat the procedure rapidly, about once every second.

High heeled shoes cause foot problems

"Some fortunate women can wear high heeled shoes without a sign of discomfort," according to Dr. Charles Bradley, President-Elect of the American Podiatry Association. "But many, after standing for only an hour or so, succumb to foot discomfort, with such symptoms as burning soles, shooting pains, and cramped toes."

Speaking during sessions at the 71st Annual Meeting of the American Podiatry Association here, Dr. Bradley advised removing those offending shoes as soon as possible when foot pain becomes intolerable.

"Take a few private moments to stretch the toes, and rotate the foot at the ankle to help relieve tension," he advised. "Before replacing the shoes, pull the tips of the hose to give the toes more room."

Nylons or panty hose should also be a perfect fit. Ones that are too small, said Dr. Bradley, can affect the feet in the same way that too small shoes can with cramping and pressure that can bring on corns, calluses, or other painful problems.

"Once back home, feet can be revitalized by taking off the shoes and resting in bed, with the feet elevated on a pillow or two," added Dr. Bradley. "Applying a cold compress to the feet for a brief period will also help bring them back to life."

Low back pain a very real problem

First is the need for attitudinal change on the part of management. Employees who complain of low back pain should not be considered as "malingerers."

Secondly, it is important to educate both workers and employers on the intermittent nature of low-back pain and the need for treatment.

Finally, providing treatment in the work place can help to keep employees on the job.

"The Chelsea Back Program is a valuable tool for controlling industrial low back cases,' Fitzler believes.

Massachusetts Container Recovery Inc. with headquarters in Wakefield and a production plant in Woburn, has recently contracted with Beverly Hospital for a complete occupational health services program. Fitzler hopes to incorporate the elements of her back program into the overall services provided for MassCRINC.

The program includes preplacement exams and physicals, periodic surveillance exams, industrial hygiene, employee health services, safety consultation and other programs.

The incidence of back injury in the industrial site warrants the inclusion of a plan for its prevention and treatment within a comprehensive occupational health services program.

"Eight out of 10 people will suffer back problems at one time or another and claims related to back pain and injury consume the largest portion of payments made for workers compensation," claims Fitzler.

Inquiries regarding occupational health services may be directed to Mrs. Sandra Fitzler, c/o Beverly Hospital.

Low back pain is a very real problem for a significant portion of the American adult population, often resulting in lost time from work and reduced productivity.

Close to 70 million workers in the U.S. have experienced at least one episode of severe and prolonged back pain in their lives. After the first back injury, a person is five times as likely to have a second injury. A planned program of education, treatment and exercise for the affected work force can significantly decrease the incidence of back pain, says Sandra Fitzler, of Woburn, occupational health nurse at Beverly Hospital.

According to Fitzler, a former Winchester resident, management support of such a program in the work environment is vital to its success.

In 1980, while working in occupational health at the Biltrite Corp. in Chelsea, Fitzler developed and instituted the "Chelsea Back Program" to help control industrial back injury and alleviate back pain among the Biltrite employees.

The program had dramatic results in decreasing frequency rate of back injury and in reduced worker's compensation costs.

These findings were reported recently in the July 1983 issue of Occupational Health and Safety in an article co-authored by Fitzler with Richard A. Berger, CSP, corporate manager at Dennison Manufacturing Co. in Framingham.

"There are three significant parts to this type of back program in the work site," says Fitzler, who plans to incorporate these principles into Beverly Hospital's program.

Career schools grow

Thousands of students each year are demanding training for some of the decade's "hot" career fields — such as computers, electronics and health care. And, many of them are turning to private career schools to learn the skills that are in demand.

Over one million students enrolled in private career schools in 1982. At the same time, the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools, which represents accredited post-secondary schools, reports enrollments up nearly 15 percent.

"There are probably over 100 different reasons why our industry is enjoying such a great influx of students," said Mike Freedland, president of NATTS. "But the real key comes down to jobs."

Today many individuals, including college graduates, have difficulty finding job opportunities because they lack the job skills employers want. For many others, however, changes in technology, product demands, demographics and a variety of other economic factors have brought great prosperity.

"Americans are in for a decade of sweeping demographic, economic and geographic realignment," said Freedland. "Future opportunities for the unskilled will be very limited while skilled workers will find employment opportunities are numerous."

Although today's emphasis on job training and the increasing demand for skilled workers has made vocational education one of the fastest growing sectors in U.S. education, representatives in the trade and technical school industry continue to look ahead.

"Our biggest challenge is keeping up," said Freedland. "We can't afford to be looking back."

"We are buying and changing equipment and curriculum at a furious pace. Our very survival depends on our ability to know what jobs are available and to train workers for them."

Data processing, electronics, medical services, drafting, auto repair, and radio-TV servicing are currently the "hottest" occupations. But according to Freedland, there is always a constant demand for more carpenters, cooks and chefs, plumbers, air condicitioning mechanics, dental assistants, and many other trades.

TIPS ON CHOOSING A SCHOOL

In all, students can choose from among 98 potential careers that are listed in the NATTS Handbook of Trade and Technical Careers and Training. However, Freedland advises all students to consider several of the following factors before enrolling in any school.

COURSES — Are the courses current? Will the material used in these courses prepare you for employment in your chosen field? TEACHERS — Are they experienced? What are they doing to stay abreast of the rapid changes in your field? ACCREDITATION — Is the school accredited? Accreditation means the school has passed a thorough examination of its educational quality, teaching ability, and administrative integrity by an accrediting agency recognized by the U.S. Department of Education. STATE LICENSING — Is the school licensed by the state? Most states require licensing and a notice should appear in the school's catalog. FACILITIES AND EQUIPMENT — Are the facilities well maintained? How old are they? Is the equipment in the school actively used in today's job market? HANDS—ON TRAINING — Is there a lab or shop that can provide "hands-on" experience with the tools of your trade? How much time is alloted for such training? PLACEMENT — Does the school help its graduates find jobs? COST — How much money for how much training? Does the cost of tuition include all the necessary supplies and support materials which are required to train for this career? FINANCIAL AID — Does the school have any kind of financial aid program? What benefits are available? What is the criteria for eligibility for such programs?

bend as a result of coming too close to a scared-stiff raccoon and then swerving into your car are for real. I always seem to bump into these drivers at the same time every morning, so I immediately flip on my blinker and make a quick lane change. Especially to avoid the ones who enjoy playing chicken with a raccoon after he's already been run over. There's something really sadistic about this type of driver.

I enjoy studying the faces of drivers who like to beat red lights. Once you've exited from the expressway in Boston, you encounter red lights as often as you hit ruts (Boston's got plenty of those). It is prudent to slow down at an intersection, even when the light is green. There is always some nurd with his hands gripping the steering wheel and his foot squashing the accelerator coming from the opposite direction, just betting he can beat the light before it switches to red. These drivers should either take up playing video games or try living Mario Andretti's life vicariously through tv's coverage of the Indy 500.

Then there is the driver who refuses to let you pass. He's usually the same guy who won't let you take your exit, or challenges you as you try to maneuver your way onto the highway. It's times like these you wish for just a fleeting moment that you could be Mad Max and teach the guy a lesson.

The worst character you'll meet in the morning rush hour commute is the impatient driver who is constantly leaning on his horn and talking to the traffic as if the cars can hear him and are able to respond every beckon. These drivers either become traffic subjects for a laboratory for abnormal psychology, or they drive you to that same laboratory.

There is nothing more frustrating than to be moving along slowly in rush hour traffic when the temperature soars up around ninety degrees and the humidity level becomes oppressive. Because there's always some show-off in an air conditioned car who has to let you know how comfortable he is and how miserable you are. It's drivers like him that cause donnybrooks in the middle of traffic jams and leave one person dead and another mortally wounded. The alternative is either buy an air conditioned car, or quit working during the summer months.

Who knows, people watching on the way to work may become a big fad in the future, particularly if transportation officials' predictions that it'll take twelve hours to get to your job via the expressway by the turn of the century come true. There's no telling what kind of characters you'll encounter on the highways by then.

Area residents return from sketching safari in East Africa

The Expedition, made up of mostly North Suburban residents led by Velmure Art Studio's Owner, professional artist, lecturer, naturalist Bill Velmure, spent 18 days (some members extended to 28 days) on Safari in the bush, mountains, forests, plains, and the cost of Kenya. Some flew in hot air balloons over the Serengeti Plains, sighted, sketched or photographed over 150 different lions, half dozen cheetah, four leopards, many crocodiles and hippo, thousands of elephants, rhino and the beginning of the great annual migration of the herds of wilde beast and zebra from Tanzania.

This was Bill's 14th return to Africa. The group visited 19,340 ft. high Mt. Kilimanjaro at Amboseli Game Reserve, Tsavo National Park, Mombasa, Diani Beach, Governors Camp in Masai Mara, and Kenya's most remote area, Lake Turkana.

The Studio at 77 Haven Street, Reading, will display work from the trip; open to the public, admission free, during September. Call 942-0699 for hours.

Geo. facts

The saying, "they breed like rabbits" did not come out of thin air. A single female European rabbit, theoretically, could have 16 million descendents in four years, says International Wildlife magazine.

An acre of trees can remove 13 tons of dust and significant amounts of other potentially harmful gases every year from the surrounding environment, says National Wildlife magazine.

Natural and artificial flavorings are most common food additives

Of the almost 3,000 food additives permitted by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, more than half of them — about 1,700 — are flavoring compounds.

These include naturally occurring flavors, nature-identical synthetic flavors, and synthetic flavors which do not resemble anything found in nature.

"Often a single food will contain a mixture, up to 125 different compounds, to create a specific flavor," says Nancy C. Stutzman, Extension Home Economist, Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Ma. 01742.

Natural raspberry flavor, for example, contains more than 40 chemicals, including 11 acids, 10 alkaloids, 15 esters, and 15 carbonyl compounds. Synthetic raspberry flavor, on the other hand, contains 36 compounds.

"Synthetic flavors are frequently used because they are cheaper, more available than nature's supply, and often more stable during processing," Stutzman points out.

The difference between, say, raspberry yogurt and raspberry flavored yogurt is that raspberry yogurt contains only the fruit for flavor. Raspberry flavored yogurt, however, may have natural flavors added to it, such as raspberry flavor extract.

The phrase "artificially flavored raspberry yogurt," though, can mean that either artificial raspberry flavored was added or that a combination of artificial and natural raspberry flavors was used.

Unless specified by name, colors added to foods are listed in the ingredient label as "artificial." In contract, flavors are distinguished by their source. Flavors derived from nature are listed as "natural" and those that are man-made are listed as "artificial".

The most common flavor added to food is sugar, obviously used to add sweetness. Salt, also used as a preservative, is another very commonly used flavor. For tartness, citric acid is often used although fumaric, malic, phosphoric, tartaric, and adipic are not uncommon.

AUDITION FOR DOLLY

Come and join in the excitement of being involved in a community theatre production! The North Reading Theatre Workshop, Inc. is holding auditions for its Fall production of "Hello, Dolly!" on Sept. 6, 7, and 8 at North Reading High School.

"Hello, Dolly!" incorporates a very large cast of both singers and dancers, as well as 9-10 major character roles. Among these are Dolly Levi, a fortyish New York matchmaker whose chief career is "meddling"; Irene Malloy, the refined owner of a hatshop in Manhattan, and her giggly young assistant Minnie Fay. These three women become ultimately involved with Horace Vandergelder, a grouchy, middle-aged feed store owner from Yonkers, and his two shop clerks, Cornelius Hackl and Barnaby Tucker. Also interwoven into the plot is Horace's "weepy" niece Ermengard, and her struggling artist boyfriend, Ambrose Kemper. These parts all require singing, and those interested in auditioning for one of these specific roles should be prepared to sing a song from the show. There are also a number of smaller character parts for both men and women, which could double as singing and dancing chorus members.

For those of you who are just too shy to be on stage, we also need your talents in the areas of technical, back-stage, and support staff. Community theatre is only a successful as the efforts of its membership; there is plenty of opportunity to use all types of talents and skills, and the rewards of being an integral part of your new theatre "family" make the time commitment very worthwhile.

For more information regarding the audition of the N.R.T.W., please contact the Greenes at 24 Haverhill St., North Reading. We look forward to meeting you on Sept. 6.

Stoneham resident awarded music certificate

At the conclusion of the summer session of the New England Conservatory of Music's Orff-Schulwerk Program, Mrs. Gerry Cruickshank, music specialist in Stoneham, was awarded the highly coveted Level Three certification certificate in Orff-Schulwerk from the New England Conservatory of Music.

After having completed Levels One and Two, the students in the advanced Level Three course explore in depth the current philosophies and musical literature now being offered in the Orff-Schulwerk. Emphasis is on building curricula to suit individual needs. Students write for the Orff ensemble using various musical forms, the modes, and varying textures of orchestration. The course culminates with advanced student teaching of small and large adult groups.

The distinguished faculty consisted of Avon Gillespie, who is a former guest professor at the Orff Institute in Salzburg and widely known for his teaching throughout the U.S. and Canada; Maureen Kennedy, author of Circle Round the Zero and Director of the Program in Orff Studies at the New England Conservatory of Music; Ursula Schorn, an international headliner for the American Orff-Schulwerk Association Conference, a former faculty member of the Orff Institute in Salzburg and movement therapist in Berlin; and Holly Jones Stumpf, a graduate of the first special course in English given at the Orff Institute and holds an Artist Diploma in Flute from the Mozarteum.

The Orff-Schulwerk has been described by Orff Specialist, Nancy Ferguson, as a "philosophy of music education, expounded by the German composer, Dr. Carl Orff, which spirally builds music concepts and skills while involving the child actively in movement, speech, rhythm, singing, playing instruments and improvisation." The Schulwerk approach to music education is a mixed media, multi-faceted expression of the total child at work through play.

Mrs. Cruickshank intends to implement the Orff-Schulwerk to a much greater extent in her teaching at the Robin Hood School.

Morgan Memorial needs houseware donations

Home furnishings and housewares are urgently needed at Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries' attended donation trailers at Star Market, Saugus Plaza, Rte. 1, Saugus; MediMart Shopping Center, Bedford Street, Lexington; and the Stop & Shop, 905 Massachusetts Avenue, Arlington, 9 a.m. — 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Residents of Burlington, North Reading, Reading, Stoneham, Winchester and Woburn are served by the attended donation trailers.

Customers' demand has risen for clothing and housewares, and more donations are needed to assure a full line of merchandise throughout the fall season.

If more household goods and clothing are donated to Goodwill, Goodwill can rehabilitate and train more handicapped people for jobs, said Philip Kivlin, Morgan Memorial's Transportation Manager.

Many handicapped workers are directly involved in the sorting, cleaning, hanging, sizing, pricing and shipping of this merchandise, he said.

"Thanks to the public's generous donations, steady work is provided to mentally, physically and emotionally handicapped adults," Kivlin said.

Goodwill urges the public to donate the following: clothing and shoes, small appliances, dishes, glassware, bric-a-brac, pictures-frames, antiques, lamps, radios-TV-stereos, small furniture, toys, games, dolls, paperbacks, records, clocks, handbags and umbrellas.

The yellow Goodwill trailer is attended by a Goodwill attendant who will provide you with a tax receipt for all donated goods.

Goodwill has replaced all its boxes with attended donation centers throughout Greater Boston to ensure protection and careful handling of all donated goods. To ensure that your donation is not vandalized, stolen or damaged by the elements, be sure to donate only between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Dr. Russell Carpenter of Winchester (Professor Emeritus, of Tufts University) was in charge of Tufts. Jumbo, the largest elephant in the world was on exhibit there (stuffed, of course). The hide was donated by P.T. Barnum, of the famous Barnum and Bailey Circus. Mr. Barnum was a shrewd businessman. He found a unique way to get people out of the circus tent to allow more paying customers in. He had a huge sign posted saying: This way to the Egress. Thinking it was a rare animal people trooped through the one way door, and found themselves OUTSIDE.

My neighbor Rowan Fitzgerald, way many years ago the Human Cannon Ball. He was shot out of the circus cannon three times a day. But they had to let him go. He put on so much weight that he became the wrong caliber.

My Aunt Maria missed her usual afternoon nap yesterday; she slept right through it. She's hooked on Beano. Every night of the week she's somewhere playing that game. Last Sunday morning was most embarrassing. The church lector was reading the numbers of the hymns that were to be sung during the services saying 24-32-4-19-57 when Maria called out "BEANO!!"

On the morning of the Battle of Waterloo, Napolean walked into a crowded shoe store, took a deep breath and gasped out, "I smell Defeat."

President Reagan has a Heckler on his staff, and I have one too. He stands in the middle of the Elks Hall in Woburn and shouts, "just because your Ears look like two potatoe chips, that doesn't make you Wise."

I loved the Tarzen movies, especially hearing King Kong singing, "Girl-rella Of My Dreams" to his sweetheart. I go ape when I'd hear it.

I wish I knew as much about growing vegetables as Mr. Robert Spence does, then I wouldn't have to sing this song. "Pole beans, lettuce, potatoes, corn./ Mean garden work from early dawn./Then guests for dinner, I soon learn,/ Are aphids, bugs and a tomatoe worm."

Oscar Jacobson, my friend of many years, reads this column in The Stoneham Independent. He is an expert auto mechanic who goes way back into the days when there were very few Nuts behind the steering wheels. A doctor asked Oscar, "why do you people charge more than the medical profession for your services?" Oscar, answered this way. "We deserve everything we get. You doctors are working on the same model since Adam and Eve, while we mechanics must learn about a brand new model every year."

Basketball players never die, they sit in front of me at the movies.

Frank Mazzoni from Tewksbury told his son everything he did in World War II. After listening intently he asked Frank this poignant question. "What did they need all those other soldiers for, Dad?"

At a Lynnfield Country Club dance a hostess asked me, "Why aren't you dancing,?" "I'm a little stiff from polo," I explained. "Well," she snapped back, "I don't care where you're from you should dance and enjoy yourself."

My cousin Felix D'Amore from Wakefield was, after intensive training, a "Super Spy" during World War II. A Lieutenant came to Wakefield to get Felix for a secret assignment. He was on the right street but couldn't find the number so a man sitting on the steps said, "There are three D'Amores in that three family house. Angelo, the tailor on the first floor. Nick, the shoemaker on the second and Felix D'Amore, the "Super Spy" on the third floor. Which one do you want?

Debbie Lisano from Burlington should enter the Miss America contest because she has beauty, personalitly, and charm. Many years ago my wife entered a bathing beauty contest, the bathing suit won first prize.

Frank Perdue Airlines is always on time, never a delay on account of Fowl weather.

I always vote for a bus driver. I like middle-of-the-roaders.

The Statue of Liberty invites the tired, huddled masses. They came and are in Washington, D.C. working for the Government.

Horse thieves in Texas would all get a "Suspended," sentence; they were Hung. One of them was being led to the gallows one morning when it was discovered that someone stole the rope during the night. The condemned man let out a cry of relief saying, "No Noose is Good Noose."

EPA found out that the reason the Eskimo houses have been crumbling is because of defective Ig-glue. I'll bet I lost some readers with that one.

Robert Mazzaferro is a Supervisory Engineer but his hobby is woodworking. Bob bought a house in North Reading that was owned by a bootlegger. The foundation is stoned, the walls are plastered, the windows shutter when the wind blows, the window panes have that glazed look and the steps stare right back at you. It's no wonder that Bob is always in good "Spirits," while working in his house.

Bald Eagle restoration begins second year

With the arrival of four baby bald eagles from Manitoba, Canada, a project designed to restore this American symbol to the State of Massachusetts enters its second year. The goal of the Eagle Restoration Project is to ensure the successful return of these proud birds as a breeding species in the Commonwealth.

The project represents a cooperative agreement between the Massachusetts Audubon Society and the Massachuetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife. Funding for two years of the five-year project has been provided by Bank of Boston, which has used the eagle as its corporate symbol for nearly 200 years.

According to Project Leader Jack Swedberg of the Mass. Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, the restoration project is based on experience indicating that eagles return to breed at the site where they were nurtured. Swedberg and his associates will place the baby eagles in an artificial nest, or "hacking tower," in a wilderness area at Quabbin Reservation in central Massachusetts. Toward the end of the summer, when sufficiently mature, the eagles will be released. Prior to release they will have tags and small transmitters put in place to make identification and tracking easier. If all goes well, the eaglets should return to the Quabbin area to breed in about five years.

As with last year's project, the eaglets will be attended around the clock by graduate student David Nelson, who will live at the Quabbin site. Although never seen by the birds, Nelson will feed them and observe their behavior through a one-way glass wall in the hacking tower.

A media day will be held later this summer to provide reporters with a chance to observe the eaglets and find out more about this unique project. In addition, filmmaker Chris Knight, renowned for his documentary, "American Challenge," is recording this summer's events as part of a documentary film on the bald eagle project. This film is being made possible, in part, through funding from Bank of Boston.

For more information, please call Mass. Audubon at (617) 259-9500 ext. 232 or the Mass. Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, in Westboro, at (617) 366-4470.

Reading Children's Drama Workshop's 11th year

The Children's Drama Workshop, 19 Robin Road, Reading, marks its eleventh year with the beginning of the fall-winter semester on September 19th. Taught by Irene Ehl, the Workshop is for children from 7 to 16 years of age.

The Workshop year is divided into two 15-week semesters. The first semester is devoted to theater games, improvisations and pantomimes. "Through the playing of theater games," according to Mrs. Ehl, "and the intuitive unrehearsed acting in improvisations and pantomimes, the student explores his own potential by sharpening his concentration, expressing his emotions with body and voice and using his imagination, thus creating on three levels — the intellectual, the physical and the intuitive."

The second semester concentrates on rehearsing monologues, scenes and plays for a public performance in June. During this period the student learns the art of focus and motivation, the building of stage character and stage movement. Mrs. Ehl states, "Public performance will raise the student's whole level of understanding and skills experienced during the first semester. The importance of both semesters is that together they work towards one goal, the total growth of the student in creativity, self-confidence and discipline."

Also, by becoming aware of the variety of human experiences through the playwright's eyes and by acting out some of these situations, the children learn more about themselves and the world around them.

Within the past two years several Children's Drama Workshop students have acted in local community and summer theaters, playing major roles in comedy, drama and musical comedy.

Irene Ehl, founder of the Children's Drama Workshop, is a certified teacher and a graduate of Boston University with a degree in theater arts and speech. She has been an active member of the Quannapowitt Players of Reading for many years, both as an actress and director. Mrs. Ehl also directs for other community theaters and has acted and directed in the New England Theater Conference.

Doctor's visit no longer last resort

Americans no longer hesitate to make an appointment with their physician when nagging doubts about their health arise. Better health education and a heightened awareness of personal fitness in the last several decades have contributed to the increase in the number of visits to physicians.

During the two-year period 1977-78, males in the United States made more than 460 million such visits, an average of more than two visits yearly per person. Females made nearly 700 million visits to physicians, or about three visits per person each year. These findings are based on data from the National Ambulatory Medical Care Survey, 1977-78, and are reported in the current issue of the Statistical Bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Foundation.

The vast majority of visits to physicians were attributed to consultations concerning old problems; about 60 percent of all visits by both male and female patients fell into this category. New patients accounted for about 15 percent of all visits and about 25 percent were related to new problems detected in patients previously seen by the physician.

Most of the new problems presented to physicians were of recent origin. About half of all complaints based on specific symptoms had arisen less than a week prior to visiting the physician — 52 percent among females and 50 percent among males. An additional one in six visits pertained to symptoms that were of one- to three-weeks' duration. Fewer than one in six patients with specific symptoms waited longer than three months before consulting a physician.

In the judgement of attending physicians, somewhat more than half of all female patients in the study were considered to have a condition that was not serious; among male patients slightly less than half were considered not seriously ill. Only about 20 percent of the male patients and about 15 percent of the female patients were deemed seriously ill. Although male patients included a somewhat higher proportion of those found to be seriously ill, the largest number of seriously ill patients were female, Metropolitan's statisticians write.

More office visits were made to physicians in general and family practice than to physicians in any other speciality. About three eighths of all visits made by both male and female patients were to physicians in this speciality.

Visits to physicians specializing in obstetrics or gynecology ranked second in number of office visits among females (15 percent). Among male patients, visits to pediatricians (13 percent) were second; this was the only speciality where more visits were recorded for males than for females.

Diagnostic services used by physicians included physical examinations and-or histories limited to one specific body site or system; this service was provided in about three fifths of all visits. Also relatively frequent were blood pressure checks (27 percent among males and 38 percent among females) and clinical lab tests (19 percent for males and 23 percent for females). A general examination was made and-or a history taken in 22 percent of all visits by either male or female patients. In about one in 10 visits no diagnostic services were provided.

Drugs were the most commonly prescribed therapy (51 percent among males and 54 percent among females). Next in frequency was diet and-or counseling (26 percent among males and 28 percent among females). There was no therapeutic service at all in about one in five visits.

The majority of all office visits to physicians lasted between six and 15 minutes (56 percent for both male and female patients). About one in four visits to the physician's office lasted longer than a quarter of an hour and approximately one in 20 visits extended beyond a half hour. In about 3 percent of the visits no direct contact was made with the physician; in these instances care was provided by a member of the physician's staff.

At the conclusion of the visits most patients were directed to return for a follow-up visit at some specified time; 58 percent of the males and 63 percent of the females were so advised. These figures are in close agreement with the findings relating to the proportion of patients who present old problems. Nearly a quarter of the patients were requested to return if they thought it necessary. In about a tenth of all cases (13 percent among males and 10 percent among females), no arrangements were made for follow-up.

The Statistical Bulletin, a quarterly published by the Metropolitan Life Foundation, provides information on health, longevity, population, mortality, disability and related topics.

Oriental Accents Give Beef Liver Special Appeal

Most cooks know that liver is highly nutritious. But what they don't always know is how to prepare liver so that the family will eat it and benefit from its excellent nutrition.

For a liver entree sure to be eaten with enthusiasm, try Speedy Liver and Vegetable Skillet. Thin slices of liver, flavored with soy sauce, are teamed with stir-fried onion, carrots and celery, which have been boldly seasoned with cumin and coriander. As a bonus, this satisfying main dish is quick and easy to prepare.

Look to liver to contribute many essential nutrients to the diet, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board. It is a leading source of high-quality protein, iron, vitamin C and important B-vitamins. Liver is also an outstanding source of vitamin A.

Speedy Liver and Vegetable Skillet

- 1 pound beef liver, sliced
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 medium onion, sliced
- 2 cups thinly sliced carrots
- 1½ cups thinly sliced celery
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 2 tablespoons oil
- ½ teaspoon coriander
- ¼ teaspoon cumin
- ¼ cup water

Pour soy sauce over liver, turning to coat. Add onion, carrots, celery and garlic to hot oil in frying pan. Sprinkle with coriander and cumin and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Place liver slices on top of vegetables in frying pan. Cook, uncovered, 2 minutes. Turn slices and continue cooking 2 minutes. Add water, cover tightly and cook slowly 8 to 10 minutes or until liver and vegetables are done. 4 servings.

Cooking down the line Coming Attractions

By William Pacino

The summer has still some time to run, but it appears that everyone is all "booked up" for the Labor Day Weekend. Our goal becomes to pass on "COMING ATTRACTIONS" a little further down the line.

A replica of the U.S.S. WASP, the World War II aircraft carrier distinguished for its record in the South Pacific, will be on display at the New England Aquarium September 16 to 18.

The U.S.S. WASP replica is huge - 45-feet in length and 8-feet wide. It will be mounted on a flatbed truck on public display in front of the Aquarium plaza.

Boston Mayor Kevin White has prociaimed September 10 to 17 as U.S.S. WASP week during the 40th anniversary reunion of men and women who have been assigned to duty on the venerable ship throughout its illustrious career.

How old is it?

The Museum of Fine Arts will host Dr. Peter Klein, Diplon-Holzwirt, University of Hamburg, for a lecture on the subject of Tree Rings and Rogier van der Weyden. Dr. Klein is an internationally recoginized expert in dendrochronology, a relatively new technique which enables scientitsts to determine the age of wooden objects. Using paintings from the Museum's collection to illustrate, he will explain this fascinating field in clearly understandable terms, showing how tree rings and other clues help scientists to date paintings on wood more accurately than earlier methods. Free tickets are required and are available at the West Wing box office beginning at 2 PM. For more information, call the Museum of Fine Arts at 267-9300, x289.

"Flying Yankee" heads North

A special railroad excursion train from Boston to Bangor, Maine through rural Northern New England will operate for one time only, Saturday and Sunday, September 10-11. The trip will be sponsored by the Massachusetts Bay Railroad Enthusiasts., Inc.

THE FLYING YANKEE

The diesel-powered, specially-chartered excursion train will depart Boston's North Station at 8 AM on Saturday, September 10, with intermediate passenger stops at Winchester and Andover, Mass., Dover, New Hampshire, and Portland, Maine. The train will return to the Boston area late Sunday afternoon, September 11.

The excursion train will be named "The Flying Yankee" in honor of the famed train of that name operated on the Boston to Bangor route by the Boston & Maine and Maine Central Railroads. Mass. Bay RRE's recreation of "The Flying Yankee" will mark the first time in over twenty-three years that a passenger train has operated from Boston to Bangor.

The fare for this recreation will be $169 per person (double occupancy), with a limited number of single accommodations available at $189 per person. Box lunches will be provided both Saturday and Sunday.

Information and reservations may be had by calling 277-2843 or by writing Mass Bay Railroad Enthusiasts, P.O. Box 208, East Walpole, Mass. 02032.

THEATER:

Boston is the first stop on a new national tour of "The Wiz" which will go on to play such cities as Chicago, Cleveland, Washington, DC, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and more cities before returning to Broadway in April. "The Wiz" will play in Boston for 2½ weeks through October 2. Stephanie Mills stars.

The Shubert Theatre will host this production beginning September 16th. Tickets may be obtained by calling the Schubert Theatre at 426-4520.

George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" will begin a limited engagement Tuesday, Sept. 6th at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts. The new Sherwin M. Goldman production, direct from New York's Radio City Music Hall will continue for three weeks only, through September 24.

The performance schedule for "Porgy and Bess" at the Wang Center is as follows: Tuesday through Sat. evenings at 8 PM, matinees on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday at 2. There will be a special Monday evening performance at 8 PM, September 19th.

Tickets are available directly at the Wang Center box office, 268 Tremont Street, or may be charged by phone by calling

Porgy and Bess

542-3600, and at all Ticketron outlets.

If you were a "Wiz" at reading tree rings, then you would not need to take the train to see a WASP. However, such cases are extremely rare, so COMING ATTRACTIONS gives you just what you need to know. But if you feel that something is missing, write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about it. We are just waiting to jump in and try something new.
